

Out of the Office

▲ Set and match for BofA and Tenacity

Bank of America Massachusetts President Robert Gallery and Tenacity President and founder Ned Eames took in a tennis match on Boston Common recently to mark their partnership. B of A recently gave a $75,000 grant to Tenacity, an organization focused on scholastic, character and physical development of urban youth.

Whittier Street honors Yeracaris

Pano Yeracaris, right, vice president and chief medical officer of Network Health, receives Whittier Street Health Center's Health Champion Award from the Whittier Street President and CEO Frederica Williams during the center's annual Men's Health Summit at the Roxbury YMCA.

▲ Chalking it up to architecture

Tim Bailey, Cindy Boudreau and Vivienne Kenny from Margulies Perruzzi Architects take part in a sidewalk art festival to mark the kickoff of Common Boston 2010. Common Boston is a volunteer committee of the Boston Society of Architects that organizes Boston's only free, public festival that opens up city to celebrate architecture and design.

◀ Flag day

A recent corporate flag football tournament at Gillette Stadium benefited the Building Education Leaders for Life (BELL), a provider of summer and after-school programs. From left, BELL scholar Eryka Sanko, Allyce Najimy, executive director of The Foundation To Be Named Later, BELL CEO Dr. Tiffany Cooper Gueye and BELL board Chairwoman Laurene Sperling.