

Boxford's Davis appointed associate medical director

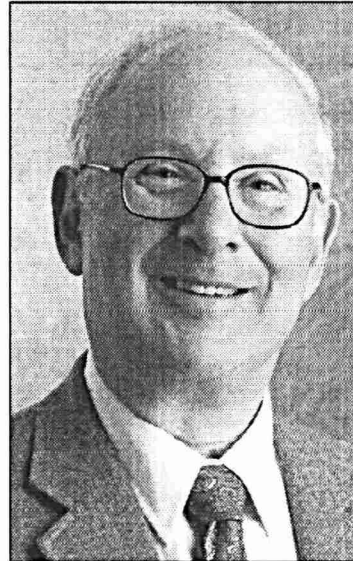

Network Health announced today the appointment of Boxford resident Dr. Stephen Davis as associate medical director. Davis, a Boxford selectman, will be involved in the plan's care management and utilization management teams. In this position, he will provide medical oversight to care managers who coordinate member's care across the continuum of illness, promote effective utilization and quality of care, and monitor health care resources.

Davis previously served as medical director and pediatrician at Pentucket Medical Associates for more than 35 years. In this capacity, he introduced and monitored quality initiatives; contracted with outside specialists, insurers, and ancillary-care facilities; and assisted with medical group governance.

Davis also sat on various committees at Partners Health-Care, primarily focused on contracting, medical management, computerized medical records, network operations, and funds flow. Prior to joining Pentucket Medical Associates, Davis served in the United States Air Force as a medical officer.

Davis earned a doctor of medicine from Tufts University School of Medicine and completed his residency at Brooklyn Jewish Hospital. Davis earned a bachelor of arts from Harvard University.

Network Health is nationally recognized for its integrated model of care, which provides a team of in-house medical, mental health, social service, and pharmacy professionals to coordinate the care of members with complex health needs and address their non-medical barriers to care. In its efforts to improve the health and well-being of its members and their diverse communities, Network Health partners with a growing network of nearly 18,000 primary care providers, specialists, hospitals, and community organizations to serve members in more than 300 cities and towns across Massachusetts.
